APPLICATION NUMBERS

OPPOSITION

Notice is hereby given that any person who has grounds of opposition to the registration of any of the marks advertised herein according to classes under the heading "Application Advertised before Registration" may, within two months from the date of this Journal, lodge Notice of Opposition on Form T.M-5 accompanied by the prescribed fee of Rs.6,000/-.

The period for lodging Notice of Opposition may be extended by the Registrar if he thinks so and upon such terms as he may direct.

Request for extension of time shall always bear the reference the name of prospective opponent and the number of Trade Marks, if any, to be made basis of opposition.

It is desirable that formal opposition should not be lodged until notice has been given by letter to the applicant for registration, so as to afford him an opportunity of withdrawing his application before the expense of preparing the Notice of Opposition is incurred. Failure to give such notice may be taken into account in considering any application by an opponent for an order of costs if the opposition is uncontested by the applicants.

NOTIFICATION

It is notified for general information that Form TM-1, must be completed in all respects and informations asked for must be provided. Instructions for Completions of TM-1, given on this form in the Rules should be followed. The instruction at (f) and (g) relating to user and signature are clear and noncompliance leads to over work for the Trade Marks Registry and un-necessary delay for the Applicants. Incomplete forms will not be received, and if received by POST will not be examined at their turn, till they are complete in all respects.

EXTENSION OF TIME

2. It has been observed that in opposition and Rectification cases, both the parties or their Agents/Advocates make requests on Form TM-56 for Extension of time, which are liberally granted to the parties. This practice not only delays the disposal of cases, but also results in accumulation of work. In order to discourage this practice, it is notified for general information that no unnecessary extension of time will be allowed except substantiated by cogent and convincing reasons and that mere collection of data or compilation of paper would not be sufficient reasons for asking such extension. All concerned should note and cooperate for early disposal of contested cases. Besides requests for extension of time in opposition cases must be accompanied by valid power of authorization, without which such requests are liable to be treated as un-authorized.

AUTHENTICATION OF FOREIGN DOCUMENTS AND POWER OF ATTORNEY.

3. It is notified for general information that all Foreign Documents and the Power of Attorneys shall be executed before, and authenticated by a Notary Public, or any Court, Judge, Magistrate, Consul or Vice Consul, or Representation of the Central Government as enumerated in Section 85 of the Evidence Act.

REGULATIONS

UNDER SECTION 82 OF THE TRADE MARKS ORDINANCE, 2001

GEOGRAPHICAL INDICATION "SARGODHA KINNOW" AS A COLLECTIVE MARK

PREAMBLE:

WHEREAS peculiarities of particular regions in respect of items pertaining to different classes of products have lead to recognition of such items internationally as Geographical Indications (GI);

AND WHEREAS GIs have been recognized globally through various conventions including the Trade Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights (TRIPS), World Trade Organization (WTO) agreements, Paris Convention, 1883 along with their modifications from time to time, etc. to which Pakistan is also a signatory;

AND WHEREAS Sargodha Kinnow has emerged to be an important GI for its special qualities along with other unique inherent characteristics due to its cultivation in the particular environment of the areas situated at the banks of River Jehlum which gives Sargodha Kinnow its exclusive characteristics. The said areas presently include revenue limits of District Sargodha in the Province of the Punjab, Pakistan namely Tehsil Sargodha, Bhalwal, Kot Momin, Sillanwali, Sahiwal and Shah Pur more particularly identified in the map annexed herewith.

AND WHEREAS during the year 1943-44, the fruit of Kinnow mandarin along with several other citrus varieties, was introduced on an experimental basis in Pakistan. The first three plants being the progenitors of Kinnow products of Pakistan, were established in Sq. No.9 - Experimental Garden at the then Punjab Agriculture College and Research Institute, Layal-pur now known as the University of Agriculture, Faisalabad. Within few years, the nursery plants of Sargodha Kinnow were made available for commercial production.

AND WHEREAS due to its vigorous growth habit, profuse bearing, heavy yield, flavor, color, size of fruit and excellent quality tested by the researchers at the University of Agriculture, Faisalabad, Kinnow was readily recommended for cultivation and distributed widely in Sargodha region. The experiments over the period of time proved that in the region comprising of District Sargodha, the quality and yield of this fruit was outstanding and distinct which are far superior to Kinnow grown in other parts of the world. These special qualities are inherent in Sargodha Kinnow inter alia due to meteorological conditions of this region and the soil containing geologically significant alluvial deposits of River Jehlum and perennial canals.

CONDITIONS FOR USE OF COLLECTIVE MARK
UNDER CLAUSE 8 (i) OF THE REGULATIONS

I. INDEX FOR DETERMINATION OF KINNOW MATURITY

1. COLOR & SIZE:

Unlike the most other fruits, the maturity of citrus cannot be gauged by the fact that the fruit is changing color from green to mature color, whatever that color may be. The fruits of the citrus plant may be fully mature and ripe but still remain dark green in color. The ability of the fruit to change color from green to orange or yellow is dependant on the fluctuations in temperature that take place during every 24 hours. In true tropical areas, the temperature variation is very small and citrus remain green, or at best become slightly tinted with either yellow or orange. In areas where the day temperature is noticeably lower during the relevant stage of fruit development, the fruit will change color naturally. This is the case in the citrus producing areas in Pakistan, which have lower night temperature that produce the required effect. It is therefore much more reliable to use indicators such as the size and shape of the fruit, when the fruit is fully swelled out indicating that development is complete. This, coupled with experience of previous seasons first picking dates, can give very reliable indications of the correct time to being harvesting.

2. FLAVOR:

Another obvious indication is the flavor of the fruit, which will remain very acid and sharp in taste if ripeness has not been achieved. Tests can be carried out to gauge the levels of both acids and sugars which make up the greater part of this flavor:-

- a) Soluble solids (sugar levels) - can be measured by testing small amount of fruit juice in a refractometer which will give a direct indication of the percentage of soluble solids in the juice.

- b) Acidity levels - can be measured accurately by titration, which is a quick and fairly simple laboratory test. These two levels-soluble solids and acids can be compared to produce a ratio of solids and acids in the fruit. Experience would tend to indicate that a minimum solid to acid ratio of approximately 9 to 1 is necessary to produce the minimum level of acceptable flavor.

3. HARVESTING CRITERIA TO ASCERTAIN FRUIT MATURITY:

This is a vitally important aspect of the export marketing chain - incorrect or careless harvesting could ruin the whole export. During the approach to the harvesting season, fruit should be regularly checked for its individual state of maturity. Using the maturity criteria already listed, fruit for export (depending on the export market), should have minimum solids (sugar) to acid ratio of approximately 9 to 1. The fruit should also be well developed and of a suitable size for intended market. The regular harvesting staff should receive training and practice on the correct techniques to be employed for careful harvesting and handling of the fruits, before the season begins. The main points to be considered are:-

- a. Fruit should be cut from the tree using a sharp pair of scissors called as secateurs.
- b. Plucking the fruit by hand is not acceptable because this will cause more damage to the fruit, rendering it unacceptable for export markets. Basic hand plucking will pull the "button" or plug out of the fruit and possibly even rip into the skin around the button. This will cause the fruit to rapidly dry out and also be a possible infection site for a range of fungal diseases.
- c. A small button (the fruit calyx and a short section of stalk) must be left in the top of the fruit. The cut must be made only 2-3 mm from the fruit, so that only a short stalk remains attached to the fruit. If a longer stalk is left attached to the fruit (it is common to see stalks 5-8mm on some fruit), then damage will occur to other surrounding fruits in the form of stalks punctures during the handling and transportation process as fruits are pressed together.

- d. Later in the season, it would appear to be a common practice in Pakistan to harvest the fruits by ripping them off the tree along with a section of twigs approximately 10-12cm long with 4-5 leaves remaining attached. This is a bad practice in that next seasons potential fruit buds are also being ripped off the trees as well as the leaves, increasing the rate of moisture loss, and if packed for export, the leaves may possibly begin to decay and affect the fruit. This practice will also damage the tree which will then be open to infection by disease.

It is very important that the fruit is harvested at the suitable state of maturity for the intended market. During recent years, it has become a more common practice among farmers (or contractors) to harvest the fruit very late in the season with fruit being left on the tree until mid-late April in some areas. This practice will prevent the opening of flower buds and lead to a late and poor pollination and fruit set, reducing the potential crop for the coming season. Every effort should be made to ensure that the fruit is not damaged during the harvesting and handling process.

- e. The use of ladders and picking plat forms should be encouraged and the staff should be well trained in proper and careful harvesting techniques.

II. QUALITY STANDARDS

1. PROVISION CONCERNING QUALITY:

The purpose of these Quality Standards is to define the quality requirement of Sargodha Kinnow for the export after classification, processing and packaging.

a) Minimum requirement

2. PROVISION CONCERNING TOLERANCES:

A maximum up to 5% by number of the fruit not satisfying the minimum quality requirement in terms of health, soundness, size and color shall be allowed. Further not more than 5% of the fruit having lost their button shall be allowed.

3. PRESENTATION OF SARGODHA KINNOW:

a) Uniformity in Produce

The contents of each package shall contain only the fruit of the species specified on the package, for instance, Kinnow mandarin and shall be appreciably of the same degree of ripeness and development.

b) Packaging

The fruit shall be securely packed in wooden crates or corrugated cartons or any other suitable packaging as per requirements of the importers.

The packaging shall be standardized at the filling capacity of 6, 8, 10 and 13 kg.

The fruit shall be packed in such a way so as to protect the produce during handling, transportation and storage that shall not cause any external or internal damage to the fruit.

c) Labeling

Paper or stamps bearing trade specification shall be allowed provided that the printing or labeling shall be done with a non-toxic ink or glue.

The package shall be labeled clearly indicating the country of origin, trade mark where relevant, commodity, specie/variety, weight, count, name and address of the supplier. - b) No consignment of GI Sargodha Kinnow shall be exported from Pakistan if it is not accompanied by the certificate of its Geographical Indication issued by the Kinnow Growers Association Sargodha.

V. GENERAL INSPECTION PROCEDURES

1. SAMPLING:

All inspections should be carried out on a sampling basis. The inspector should choose at random a representative sample from the selected consignment (lot). This sample should be extracted from all parts of the consignment being inspected with particular care being taken to ensure it is representative of the whole. Packing that are not representative, i.e. crushed or badly damaged, should be avoided. This is particularly important if a rejection certificates is to be issued. Sample should be chosen bearing in mind that packages may have been placed in a position so as to attract or avoid attention. Try not to take samples only from the top half of piles of containers; try to make sure that labor is available for a thorough sample to be drawn which includes some containers from the bottom of consignments.

International standard ISO-874 should be used to determine the number of packages to be examined. This requires as follows:

Number of similar Package in the lot	Number of packages to be examined
Up to 100	5
101 to 300	7
310 to 500	9
501 to 1000	10
OVER 1000	15 minimum

If, after examining the above number of packages, the inspector is not satisfied as to the correct quality class of the consignment, he should examine further packages until he is completely satisfied this decision is correct.

The entire contents of the containers selected for the sample should be completely unpacked and thoroughly assessed. The findings of the inspection of each container should be recorded in the analysis columns section of the inspectors report form.

2. SPECIAL CONDITIONS TO BE OBSERVED BY THE EXPORTER BEFORE PERMISSION/AUTHORIZATION CAN BE ALLOWED:

- i. The premises of the authorized merchant should be clean, tidy and with adequate space, lighting and facilities for sorting, grading, sizing, packing, labeling, weighing, sealing and it is most important that there should be sufficient space and facilities for official inspection of the packages.
- ii. The consignment of produce should be presented for an inspection in a suitably protected area so that no package should be spoiled by the weather or water or any other defect or damage which would render it unacceptable.
- iii. The authorized merchants shall provide the labor needed for the shifting, weighing and opening of packages in connection with their inspection and dealing at all inspection centers.

- iv. All instructions with regard to the method of preparation, and inspection as well as the maintenance of records pertaining to inspected produce which may be issued as necessary by the Board of Directors, Kinnow Growers Association Sargodha should be strictly observed by all concerned.
- v. Strict observance of any future conditions or instructions issued by the Board of Directors, Kinnow Growers Association Sargodha, whenever necessary, is also required.

After an application has been received, it will be scrutinized. Verification of its contents will be necessary. An officer duly authorized by the Board of Directors, Kinnow Growers Association Sargodha will be required to visit the premises designated for processing to check that all the facilities are adequate. If the facilities are found to be inadequate the officer should note the short comings and report to the authorized officer of Kinnow Growers Association Sargodha immediately.

The Board of Directors, Kinnow Growers Association Sargodha shall reserve the right of accepting or rejecting an application for a Certificate of Authorization under the Geographical Indication Sargodha Kinnow.

VI. DISPUTE IN DETERMINATION OF THE "GI" STATUS OF PRODUCT

The responsibility for preparing, grading, packing and labeling of produce is the sole responsibility of the merchant or his agent. The Geographical Indication staff at each centre is available to advise and assist the merchant to meet the Geographical Indication Standards. If the merchant chose not to take advantage of this assistance, then they run the risk of their consignments being rejected.

In case of difference of opinion between Geographical Indication Official (Kinnow Growers Association Sargodha) and merchant (or their agents), the matter will be reported to the officer in charge at the relevant office/station of the Association.

In all such cases, the decision of the officer in charge based on the findings of his examination and inspection of the consignment, shall be binding on all parties concerned. The merchants shall, however, have the right to appeal to the Board of Directors of Kinnow Growers Association Sargodha or any officer/expert authorized by it in this regard whose decision shall be final.

In the event of a consignment being rejected for export at the GI centers of export point, all expenses or losses incurred on that account shall be borne by the merchants.

VII. MODIFICATION IN CONDITIONS:

The Board of Directors of the Kinnow Growers Association, Sargodha shall be authorized to amend, add, alter or modify these conditions from time to time in accordance with the expert advice.

MULTAN

Advertised before acceptance under section 28(1) Ordinance 2001.

REGULATIONSUNDER SECTION 82 OF THE TRADE MARKS ORDINANCE, 2001GEOGRAPHICAL INDICATION "MULTAN MANGO" AS A COLLECTIVE MARKPREAMBLE:

WHEREAS peculiarities of particular regions in respect of items or products manufactured or grown etc. pertaining to different classes of products have lead to recognition of such items or products internationally as Geographical Indications (GI);

AND WHEREAS GIs have been recognized globally through various conventions including the Trade Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights (TRIPS), World Trade Organization (WTO) agreements, Paris Convention, 1883 along with their modifications from time to time, etc. to which Pakistan is also a signatory;

AND WHEREAS in Pakistan, several varieties of mango fruit is produced in the areas stretching from Khanewal, Punjab to Hyderabad, Sindh spanning over approximately 600 kilometers. Of the entire mango producing areas in Pakistan, the region of Multan including surrounding areas, more particularly identified in the attached map, prides in producing the sweetest, tastiest and flavored mangoes of the world, commonly known as the Multan Mango.

AND WHEREAS Multan Mango stands out from rest of the varieties in its inherent sweetness and flavor characterized due to the soil and microclimate of the region. Meteorologically, Multan is hot and dry most of the year and this factor contribute effectively to the vital processes of inflorescence and fruit set. The temperature affects directly the time of bud-break leading to flowering of Multan Mango. The dry weather of Multan from November to May which are also the flowering months of Multan Mango acts as catalyst favoring productivity of Multan Mango. Such dry weather further contributes in balancing the fruit-to-vegetation ratio contrary to heavy rainfall or atmosphere containing high ratio of moisture which favors vegetative growth consequently resulting in loss of fruit growth. Another important reason of the unique sweetness and flavor of Multan Mango is the special nature of the parent material i.e. the soil of this region. Deep soils with sandy loam texture are most preferable growth media for mango cultivation. The soil of Multan region serves two crucial requirements i.e. the root anchorage and better drainage. Because of the river-fed delta and flat topography, the water-table tends to be close to the surface which is an important requirement for mango growing. Naturally rich in peroxide of iron, the nutrient status adds to the uptake capability of the soil of this region which contributes to the production of Multan Mango in this area.

AND WHEREAS in order to confer legal protection to Multan Mango as a GI and to regulate its use in order to promote economic prosperity of the growers and others dealing in Multan Mango, it has become expedient to get the same registered as a Collective Mark and to legally protect and facilitate action against infringement thereof.

NOW THEREFORE these Regulations establish and declare as follows:

REGULATIONS

UNDER SECTION 82 OF THE TRADE MARKS ORDINANCE, 2001

GEOGRAPHICAL INDICATION "SHARQPUR GUAVA" AS A COLLECTIVE MARK

PREAMBLE:

WHEREAS peculiarities of particular regions in respect of items or products manufactured or grown etc. pertaining to different classes of products have lead to recognition of such items or products internationally as Geographical Indications (GI);

AND WHEREAS GIs have been recognized globally through various conventions including the Trade Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights (TRIPS), World Trade Organization (WTO) agreements, Paris Convention, 1883 along with their modifications from time to time, etc. to which Pakistan is also a signatory;

These varieties are more commonly known as Sharqpur Guava. The name of Sharqpur Guava has been derived from Tehsil Sharqpur in Sheikhupura District. The history of Guava in Sharqpur dates back to 1927; a revenue record is attached herewith which shows orchard of Sharqpur Guava at Ghazipur Village in year 1960.

AND WHEREAS Sharqpur Guava is known for its unique aroma, taste, flavor, less seed intensity, high yield and attractive appearance. These attributes of Sharqpur Guava are inherent because of its growth in the rich fertile soil, quality underground water and meteorological conditions and a certain height from sea level of the supra referred region, the cumulative effect of which renders Sharqpur Guava distinct from other selections of guava fruit grown elsewhere. Various factors contribute towards the uniqueness and quality of Sharqpur Guava; for instance its parent material - the soil of this region which is fertile with alluvial water of Rivers Ravi and Chenab, enriching it with nutrients, extremely good drainage capacity of the soil and presence of underground sweet water, the particular location of the region and its height from sea level. There have been extensive surveys through which it has been established that it is not possible to attain the unique qualities of Sharqpur Guava if it is grown outside the said area.

AND WHEREAS in order to confer legal protection to Sharqpur Guava as a GI and to regulate its use in order to promote economic prosperity of the growers and others dealing in Sharqpur Guava, it has become expedient to get the same registered as a Collective Mark and to legally protect and facilitate action against infringement thereof.

REGULATIONS

GEOGRAPHICAL INDICATION "PHULKARI" AS A
COLLECTIVE MARKPREAMBLE:

WHEREAS peculiarities of particular regions in respect of items or products manufactured or grown etc. pertaining to different classes of products have lead to recognition of such items or products internationally as Geographical Indications (GI);

AND WHEREAS GIs have been recognized globally through various conventions including the Trade Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights (TRIPS), World Trade Organization (WTO) agreements, Paris Convention, 1883 along with their modifications from time to time, etc. to which Pakistan is also a signatory;

AND WHEREAS little is known about the source of textile art in the Indus Civilization but the tools such as bronze needles, as well as sculpted and painted representations of textiles, enable us to trace back the embroidery tradition at least to Moenjo-Daro and the Indus Civilization. Some of the fabrics depicted in the early medieval paintings in the Ajanta Caves are very similar in design to Phulkari embroideries (see John Irwin & Margaret Hall, Indian Embroideries, Ahmedabad 1973, p.1). Embroidery was probably introduced to the fertile plains of the Punjab by virtue of the region's character as a gateway to the Indian Subcontinent, and a place of settlement for migrants from Iran and Central Asia.

Originally the Punjabi women practiced the art of Phulkari solely for personal and domestic use - young girls produced their dowries, mothers and grandmothers worked for daughters and granddaughters. Phulkari and Bagh are associated with the areas of, Hazara, Rawalpindi, Sialkot, Multan and Jhelum in Punjab. In 1913, Ananda K. Coomaraswamy wrote "The original art stemmed from the rural Hindus (Jars) from Rohtak, Gurgaon and Delhi, while in Hazara a more artistic and developed form is found."

Commercial work only began in 1882, when Maharaja Ranjit Singh agreed the first export contract for Phulkari. Demand grew towards the end of the 19th century, around the time of the Punjab Exhibition of 1881 in London. During the same period, a severe drought in the Punjab forced many families to sell their old embroideries. Thereafter, an even greater market was found in the West for baghs and Phulkari and objects decorated in this style, among them purses, curtains, and assorted covers. New patterns and color combinations were developed, including the so-called 'Manchester' and 'Jubilee' Baghs. To obtain faster and cheaper production a coarser and looser style of embroidery was employed.

Phulkari appears in the Heer-Ranjha in the context of the heroine's dowry. The approximate age of a piece can usually be determined from the condition of the main fibers and the colors (dyes) used; with older pieces, for instance, it was quite common to use cotton threads instead of silk, particularly for white, green and rose. The best such embroideries available today were probably made between 1870 and 1920. The museums in Lahore and London hold many baghs and Phulkaris in their stores for which acquisition dates are known, thereby facilitating the dating of other, comparable pieces.

In the past, the cloth used from Phulkari embroidery was limited to Khaddar only; however in the modern times, the traditional Phulkari has been diversified insofar as the cloth on which it is embroidered, but the essence of Phulkari remains unaltered. The Phulkari motif appears on fine quality cloth to cater for the needs of the day. The intensive embroidery has given way to smaller designs as costly and heavier dresses become lesser in vogue. Phulkari is distinct embroidery which is easily identified from all other embroideries. The intense human effort put in to produce the piece of art as Phulkari makes it prominent and distinguishable. The art of Phulkari is being carried forward by the womenfolk of the different areas of Punjab. The embroiderers get a very small percentage of the market value of each piece, it is through registration of Phulkari as GI that the deserving would be recognized and enabled to get their due share of the proceeds of their hard work.

AND WHEREAS in order to confer legal protection to Phulkari as a GI and to regulate its use in order to promote economic prosperity of the growers and others dealing in Phulkari, it has become expedient to get the same registered as a Collective Mark and to legally protect and facilitate action against infringement thereof.

SCHEDULE

PHULKARI - THE SIMPLE STITCHES IN ADEPT HANDS

The stitches in the adept hands make it one of the most sought after embroidery craft. Shading and variation is often obtained by the using horizontal, vertical or diagonal stitches.

The folk embroidery tradition runs deep in the Punjab. Traditionally, the Phulkari and Baghs were never sold in the markets as they were only woven by the women of the house for their personal use. The significance of Phulkari in daily life is reflected by the words written at the end of the 15th century by the founder of the Sikh religion, Baba Guru Nanak that "Thou art not a worthwhile woman until thou hast embroidered thy own blouse". Village women still practice the craft, also stitching bed and cushion covers and a variety of other cloths, but the art probably reached its zenith in the late 19th and early 20th centuries.

PHULKARI - DIFFERENT KINDS

There are different varieties of Phulkari(s) made in Punjab.

1. Chope is embroidered with straight, two-sided line stitch and appears the same on the reverse. These were worked in double running stitch so that the pattern would be visible on both front and back. Only the border is embroidered and the center is left plain. It is usually red in color and worn as a veil.
2. Vari-da-bagh (bagh of the trousseau) is also on a red cloth with golden yellow embroidery symbolizing happiness and fertility. The entire cloth is covered in a lozenge design with smaller ones within the border and is again intricately worked in different colors.
3. Ghunghat bagh or sar-pallau (covering for the head) has a small border on all four sides. In the center of each side, which covers the head, a large triangular motif is worked. Sar pallu form have wide borders which are usually very bold and colorful. Assembled from lozenges and triangles, the design sometimes evokes wild and abstract fantasy landscapes with the central field decorated with small flowers, birds and other animals.

4. Bawan bagh (fifty-two in Punjabi) has as many geometrical patterns. Bawan means the number 52; in these pieces, usually 52 different patterns can be found. The field is subdivided into 42 or 48 rectangles, each containing a different multicolored motif. The remaining four or ten motifs are placed in the side or end borders.
5. Darshan dwar (the gate offering a view of the deity) is usually for presentation in temples or to adorn the walls of the home when the Granth Sahib (holy book of the Sikhs) is brought to a house. The gate motif has been inspired by the arched verandahs of the temples. It is always embroidered on a red cloth. The architectural design depicts two outer panels of all gates with arched tops. The bases face each other with motifs of humans, animals, birds, flowers etc., giving the impression of passing through a crowded street. The architecture comprises of a series of large peaked gates drawn from four to seven on either side depending on their size and the dimensions of the cloth. The gates adjoin and open inwards; between them are images of people, animals, flowers and plants, or even a railway. The roofs of the gates are worked in multicolored patterns of triangles and diamonds. Often smaller gates are embroidered in the triangular space between the selvedge and the gate roofs but without figures.
6. Suber is a Phulkari worn by a bride during marriage rites. It comprises five motifs, one in the center and one each in the four corners.
7. Chamba is a hybrid Phulkari having a series of wavy creepers, stylized leaves and flowers. It came into vogue earlier this century.
8. Thirma is a rarer type of Phulkari, the name signifies its white ground. Exclusively made by Hindus, they formed an important part of the dowry of a woman from north-western Punjab. The floral patterns were embroidered in red, violet and green - often so thickly that they give a velvety surface. The ends have characteristic diagonal rows in red satin stitch. The patterns of this type differ markedly from all other Baghs and Phulkari(s) and interestingly bear similarity to embroideries from Afghanistan and Central Asia.
9. Sainchis can be divided into two groups. The first have colored representations on a red ground of human figures, beasts, village scenes and so on, without symmetry and end borders. The second group, with black, dark brown or very rarely, blue grounds, are symmetrically drawn often has the pattern of five lotus flowers - a large, vibrant blossom in the centre, the other four in the corners. Various traditional ornaments show that Sainchi Phulkari played a part in the wedding ceremony. Abstract peacocks often appear in the end borders, contributing to the symmetry, while in between are yet more animals and objects, randomly completing the design. Scenes of everyday life on Sainchi include personal effects like jewellery, combs, domestic animals, ox-carts and household objects. Also, commonly observed are the men playing dice games, spinning wheels, cooking or other routine activities. Railway imagery consisting of a locomotive spewing thick smoke, passengers looking out of carriage windows, circus images with animals and acrobats are also widely embroidered. Especially graphics are scenes featuring figures such as a begging yogi, a man beating his wife, or a British official visits a village.

10. Besides this, designs inspired by various day to day items, fauna and flora around us also found their way into this craft.
  - a. Surajmukhi (sunflower) is a cross between a chope and ordinary bagh in brilliant yellow, which creates a stunning effect.
  - b. Mor or tota is one that has a peacock or parrot motif.
  - c. Mirchi, as the name suggests, has chilies in red, orange or green usually on brown.
  - d. Belan and parantha symbolize the rolling pin and leavened bread.
  - e. Ikka or ace of diamonds has been inspired by playing cards.
  - f. Satrang is a seven-colored Phulkari.
  - g. Jewellery items like bangles, earrings, etc., are also embroidered.
  - h. At times, a snake was embroidered, guarding a woman's treasure.
  - i. Sheeshedar was another variety popular in Haryana whereby small, round, matt-dull mirror pieces were included in the embroidered motifs.

DIFFERENCE BETWEEN PHULKARI AND BAGH

The major distinguishing feature between Bagh and Phulkari relates to the amount of embroidery. In Phulkari, the motifs are more or less regularly divided over the whole cloth, and large areas of ground fabric are visible. As a rule, the ends have quite different patterns from the centre and are often much more richly worked. The motifs on a Bagh, on the other hand, are embroidered so close to each other that the ground cloth shows as just a thin line around each motif. Also the ends of the Bagh almost always pick up the motif of the main field.

The embroidery is done for the most part upon coarse cotton cloth (khaddar) locally woven from loosely homespun yarns of irregular thickness, generally with between 10-12 warp threads/cm.

For Bagh, ground fabrics of better quality are woven, called Chaunsa khaddar (ca.15-18 threads/cm); here warp and weft have the same thickness and the material is suppler than standard khaddar. A still finer texture was also used - halwan (ca. 22-25 threads/cm) - produced only in Amritsar and Lahore. Weaving these cloths was much more time consuming, so women used it only for more costly pieces. Halwan is found more often in pieces from west Punjab, mainly Hazara and Rawalpindi.

PROCESS OF PHULKARI - FROM WEAVING TO EMBROIDERY

Khaddar was woven in narrow strips some 45-60 cm wide, thus two to three and a half stripes were sewn together for the required width. The ground was often red, considered lucky by Hindus and Sikhs alike. One also finds brown, various blue tones, black and white. Green is very rare. Hindu women from northern Pakistan mostly used a white ground with dark red silk for the embroidery.

Untwisted coarse silk yarn, produced from the outer threads of the silk cocoon, was used for the embroidery. Known as pat, the supple white yarn required careful handling. When a section of embroidery was completed, the fabric was rolled in a clean white cloth to keep it from soiling while work continued on an unembroidered part. The silk came in skeins from Kashmir, Afghanistan, Bengal and the best quality from China. It was dyed mainly in Amritsar, Jammu or Dera Ghazi Khan. The village women then bought the skeins from itinerant merchants. They also used cotton yarns (bandi) for white, black and yellow in certain pieces. Wool yarns were rarely used, except in certain specific types.

The principal stitch used for this work was the darning stitch. Indeed, the almost exclusive use of the long and short darning stitch over counted threads distinguishes Phulkari and Bagh from all other known textiles with embroidered decoration of the Sub-Continent. Normally the darning stitch moves in straight lines; in a skilled example, however, the stitch work can be more dynamic. The pattern is controlled mainly by counting threads.

PHULKARI - A TEST OF SKILLS

A woman's ability was measured by the number of patterns she could master. Since the material was, during the work, only visible from behind, a single numerical error was enough to destroy the entire symmetry. Other stitches used include chain stitch, which was used to outline figures. To fill in the motif either satin stitch or a variation known as stop stitch was preferred. Stem stitch was also used at times, as were herringbone stitch, running stitch and, for borders, buttonhole stitch.

There were no pattern books or catalogues from which designs could be copied. With practice and experience, each woman was able to develop her own repertoire. The designs were rather passed from generation to generation by word of mouth and example resulting in peculiar characteristic style of each family.

COMMON MOTIFS OF PHULKARI

The limitations of stop stitch which allows only straight lines, meant that motifs had to be very stylised. In Baghs, often only geometric patterns were used (triangles, squares, diamonds). Other common motifs are taken from daily life, and accordingly the pieces were given very literal names such as gobhi (cauliflower) bagh and mirchi (spinach) bagh. The Shalimar and chaurasia baghs recall famous Mughal gardens in their layout, while the ikka bagh is inspired by playing cards (diamond). Other designs include dhoop chhaon (sunlight and shade), laharya (wave), patang (kite), saru (Cypress), suraj rnukkhi (sunflower), panchranga (five colours) and satranga (seven colors).

The danga (river) bagh depicts a row of blue wavy stripes on a white ground, while the chand bagh recalls the play of moonlight with small white or beige lozenges on a dark red field, and the sheeshedar (mirror) Phulkari is decorated with small circular mirrors on a white ground.

PHULKARI FOR SPECIAL OCCASSIONS

Very special types of Phulkari and Bagh were made for more formal occasions.

1. In west Punjab (i.e. parts forming Punjab of Pakistan), following the birth of a boy, it was customary, on a day chosen by the local astrologer, to begin a vari da bagh. In an atmosphere of singing, dancing and gambling, sweetmeats and red yarn would be distributed and the newborn's grandmother would place the first stitch on the embroidery. This bagh would later be handed to the boy's bride on their wedding day. Worked in yellow/gold yarn on a red ground, the colors symbolize luck and fertility. The whole surface is covered with diamonds, each enclosing a smaller diamond. In especially good pieces, three sizes of concentric diamond are found, the smallest again divided into quarters. The sides and ends usually show various patterns worked in several colors. To produce such a bagh could take over a year. These pieces are today regarded as family heirlooms and worn for a short time as an act of remembrance.

2. The bawan bagh is very rare as only a few women were able to fashion this type.
3. Another more typical bagh is the darshan dwar bagh, meaning "the Gate from which one sees the God".
4. A bagh given to bride by her grandmother was known as a chope. Worn by the bride as a chador (cloak) at her wedding ceremony and bigger than all other types, the chope is started by the grandmother after the birth of a girl and can thus be compared with the vari da bagh. The borders of the chope are not embroidered so that a red stripe passes through the textile - a symbol of endless good fortune for the bride. Less often we find the figure of a small peacock or a cow, invoking protection, good luck and well-being.
5. Produced in east and southeast Punjab, sainchi phulkaris depict scenes of everyday life in the Punjab at the turn of the century and today are perhaps the most valuable and sought-after of all. The motifs were often marked on the cloth with ink and the sketch then filled with darning stitch. Wool or cotton threads are often used instead of silk.

PHULKARI AS A TRADITION OF DAILY LIFE

The original purpose of embroidery was to adorn the rough simple surface of odhinis. Gradually people began to connect some of the motifs and patterns with certain events and ceremonies, and so the textiles acquired a religious and magical significance. In a tradition minded Punjabi family, for instance, no important ceremony was held without the offering of a specific type of Phulkari by the senior woman of the family.

Many, if not most, pieces have a particular relation to parts of the marriage ceremony and married life. This fact, coupled with the rich, mainly floral motifs of the Phulkari, points to an associative connection with the family's fecundity and well-being. For example, yet another Phulkari type was used for the ceremonial bath before the wedding (nahai dhoi), the filling of the clay pots (gharoli bharna) and the mounting of the horse by the groom (ghoricharna).

The bride's family presented the groom's relations with Bagh and Phulkari, which formed a part of the dowry. When a new mother left her room for the first time on the eleventh day after the birth of a child, she wore a Phulkari. At the same time, a very large embroidered cloth - the less richly worked til patra (scattered sesame) - would be distributed to the men and women servants of the house.

The year of a Punjabi family is rich in festive days, for which sometimes Punjabi women wore Phulkari. Honored guests of a house found a Phulkari layout especially as bedding, or a tablecloth. In colonial times, sometimes a bagh was presented to a British official at Christmas, together with fruit and sweetmeats. And if a woman died before her husband, a phulkari sash would be used to wrap her body.

PHULKARI - A SYMBOL OF FAMILIAL TIES

The women of Punjab created Phulkari mostly for personal use. Traditionally speaking, the cycle began with the young girl who followed her mother's chores and learned household work including this embroidery. When the girl got married, Phulkari formed a part of her bridal trousseau. If a son was born to her, her mother would start preparing a vari da bagh, a gift she would present to her granddaughter-in-law.

The Bagh was considered a symbol of marriage and among the wealthy families; sometimes up to fifty-one pieces of various designs were given to the bride. She, in turn, wore them for auspicious and ceremonial occasions. In some parts of Punjab, it was customary to drape the new mother with a Bagh on the eleventh day after the birth of the child, when she left the maternity room for the first time.

PHULKARI FOR DIFFERENT OCCASIONS

Phulkari(s) were also made for religious ceremonies or to be used at other festive times. A Phulkari is sanctified to be used as the canopy over the holy book of the Sikhs, the 'Guru Granth Sahib'. For each different occasion, for each different setting, the versatile fingers and fertile imagination of the women of Punjab designed an impressive selection of Phulkari(s).
